

13.2 (a) Crystallization is the process whereby a glass material is caused to transform to a crystalline solid, usually by a heat treatment.

(b) Two properties that may be improved by crystallization are (1) a lower coefficient of thermal expansion, and (2) higher strengths.