

16.20 (a) The matrix phase is a continuous phase that surrounds the noncontinuous dispersed phase.

(b) In general, the matrix phase is relatively weak, has a low elastic modulus, but is quite ductile. On the other hand, the fiber phase is normally quite strong, stiff, and brittle.