

Laminar Composites

Sandwich Panels

16.29 Laminar composites are a series of sheets or panels, each of which has a preferred high-strength direction. These sheets are stacked and then cemented together such that the orientation of the high-strength direction varies from layer to layer.

These composites are constructed in order to have a relatively high strength in virtually all directions within the plane of the laminate.