

15.34 Two important characteristics for polymers that are to be used in fiber applications are: (1) they must have high molecular weights, and (2) they must have chain configurations/structures that will allow for a high degrees of crystallinity.